When Anne was moved out of the cancer ward to the palliative care ward our friends gave me looks of shock. I'd never heard of palliative care but when I looked it up I was devastated, I told myself "No, this can't be!" It was at that moment that I knew loss was coming; it's hard to describe that feeling.

We chose to ask for donations instead of flowers at Anne's funeral because we wanted to do something to help. Even if just one person benefitted from those donations it was worth it.
